Q: Protected ActivityHandler overrides I'm using the security feature of Android and would like to know if what's happening is some kind of override when a new key is pressed. From this link I understand that if the app receives a new keystroke but they haven't been registered then the framework calls the protected ActivityHandler. protected void onWindowFocusChanged(boolean hasFocus) { if (hasFocus && isActivityKeyNeeded()) { keyDown(KeyEvent.KEYCODE_DPAD_LEFT); } } From what I understand the framework calls isActivityKeyNeeded() to check if the current activity has been registered to handle the new keystroke. Is this check important? Could it raise alarms about potential security issues? A: @zp007 and @knoldsen are correct. This has to do with how long a window can be blocked before it is considered a dialog, but there is nothing inherently wrong with the way it is implemented. The activity's onWindowFocusChanged is triggered when the window focus changed and whatever key was pressed is echoed out before the window even receives focus (that is to say that if there was any input made the window was forced from focus even though it was initially set on focus). Stephen A. Smith explains why it's crucial that the team fully understand the impact of losing Robyn in the Falcons' win over the Eagles. (1:31) FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. -- Atlanta Falcons coach Dan Quinn believes Robyn Houghtaling was likely paralyzed from the waist down when her car left the road and crashed into a tree, leading to the death of her fiancé, Laremy Tunsil, who was sitting next to her. Atlanta police said Houghtaling and Tunsil were driving on a northwest Atlanta road Saturday night when they apparently drove off the road and into the tree. Tunsil died at the scene, and Houghtaling was airlifted to the hospital. Quinn said Sunday he has "tried to process" what happened. Tunsil was a senior offensive tackle and a preseason All-American who was considered the favorite to win the Outland Trophy, given to the nation's best interior lineman. The family of Tunsil is not commenting on his death.

Chuck Schumer, the Senate Minority Leader, has been accused of sexual harassment by a female producer and producer of the "For the Record" podcast. Two women told CNN that the New York senator made inappropriate sexual advances when they were working at an event he attended in Los Angeles. Schumer has denied the accusations. Chuck Schumer, the Senate Minority Leader, has been accused of sexual harassment by two women, one of whom has alleged that he "exposed" himself to her at an event in Los Angeles. Two women told CNN that the Democratic senator made inappropriate sexual advances when they were working at an event he attended in Los Angeles. One of the women went to CNN to accuse Schumer of sexual harassment, while a second woman said she had also seen Schumer expose himself during a party event. The accusations come just over a month after two senators were accused of sexual harassment in the committee room at a Senate hearing. Schumer has denied the accusations, saying that he did not recall the events in question. "Schumer unequivocally denies the allegations," his spokesman Justin Goodman said. "When he has a chance to look back, he will recall no instances of sexual harassment." The second woman, whom CNN did not name, alleged that Schumer exposed himself to her during a lunch in June 2016 when she was working for a group that organized political events in California. "This is when Chuck was in his 50s, I would say. So this is a long time ago," she told CNN. The woman said she was in the room when Schumer was introducing a guest and he started to "make jokes" about sexual harassment. Schumer then exposed himself to her and made other comments, she said. She said she felt embarrassed and uncomfortable. Schumer denied the allegations in a statement to CNN. "I've spent my whole life fighting for women and will continue to do so," he said. "I have never done anything to mislead people or to be dishonest, and I intend to settle this before the election so that my family and my Senate colleagues can move on to the issues facing America." The unnamed producer has also publicly accused Schumer of sexual harassment. On Tuesday, she tweeted that Schumer exposed himself to her at a Democratic National Committee event in May 2016. "It was at a coffee in LA following the DNC. Schumer grabbed my face & thrust his tongue in my mouth," she said on Twitter. The producer, who
