Review About a year ago I bought a Tascam's US-122 for my vocals and a US-224 for my electric guitar. Both of them cost me around $250 apiece, and I use them mostly for practice. I got a kick of the idea of recording in these usb recorders because they're not so expensive and they're very portable. I also got a very basic camcorder to have a video-less backup of recordings. As a guitar player, I basically recorded most of the songs in my library in these usb recorders, and when some of them needed to be replayed, I'd send those recordings to my computer to be rerecorded, but I wasn't satisfied with that method because a lot of time would have been wasted. The Go PlayAlong program is basically an instrument- and music recording app for your PC. It lets you record your guitar and vocals in the same session, and you can export the recording in any format that you want, which is great because you can send them to a friend or upload them somewhere. What I really like about it is that you don't need a lot of time for setting up a project

What's New In?

- Synchronize with MP3 audio: If you want to work with the original music recording while not having to set anything up, you are in for a treat! Go PlayAlong will automatically synchronize the TAB from your files with the original song's MP3 audio using the command-line. You can use this feature for offline practice or to listen to your MP3s or CDs. Even if you don't have the music on your iPad, you can sync it with the app's audio source from your iTunes library.
- Repeat for your practicing session: Get looped with your practice session: You can repeat a certain part of the song for more than 20 times without skip or interruption.
- Speed up and slow down the tempo: You can speed up or slow down the song's tempo using the drop-down knob.
- Wannabe a great recording studio: Go PlayAlong will slow down or speed up the tempo, correct the tempo, pitch it up or down, and even transpose the music automatically. If you are happy with the results, you can even edit it.
- Synchronize transcription with MP3 audio: Go PlayAlong will let you sync the transcription from your files with the original song's MP3 audio using the command line. This is a great way to test whether your transcription is the best match for the original song's transcript.
- Customize the chordal charting: With Go PlayAlong, you can display lyrics, use different colors, and select a certain string for the chords.
- Lyrics displayed: If you are working on a song that doesn't have any lyrics, you will have them available to play.
- Supports multiple MP3s: You can select any song you want to play. If you like, you can also use it to practice another song at the same time.
- Saves your progress: Go PlayAlong will automatically remember each song, so you don't have to type in the MP3 path when you open it up again.
