Secondary Menu Double cardboard snowman Like any savvy little girl, I have been listening to my Grandma's stories about making Christmas trees out of cardboard boxes. I was very young when she took me to a Christmas tree lot to pick out the one that I was going to have my make a tree out of for Christmas. I still remember that sweet smell and thinking of all the good things my grandma told me about making trees out of Christmas boxes. I love to try out new crafts and even today I still remember our family tradition of making the tree out of a Christmas Box. Secondary Menu About Explore Except Related Links Loreto is on its third go-around, calling itself Brunch. And though a full dinner menu is on the way, if Loreto's success is a model, the brunch scene in Corvallis is looking at an explosive future. Harvest is an annual farm festival, and from dawn until well after dark, the farm turns into the kind of playground you might expect to find in a big city: dazzling sunflowers, a volleyball game, a variety of musical performances, a kaleidoscopic crowd of visitors with dozens of vantage points to watch the action. Right off the line is Josephine's, with an open kitchen and a long bar that spills out from the dining room onto the sidewalk. Rich-looking pastries. And, above the bar, tons of colorful salads, like the kale salad, which is just about as good as it sounds. Channeling the inner Ansel Adams, the Ancient Art of Photography is a beautiful coffee table book that will help anyone and everyone capture a masterpiece in front of their eyes.
