What's new in Dominions 5 - Warriors Of The Faith:

Soundtracks are at around 300 CDDB points, and I've only been posting solo soundtracks once or twice a month for a while so here's one I did in record time - Edgeware Heath's Soundtrack by Eddie Midnight. It's a game I love and it features a really interesting and novel premise, so it's one of those projects I was excited about making very quickly. Fingers crossed this doesn't come across as too much of an easy listening experience. Download the soundtrack here, and note where I got my samples from: zombiefles.com

LEAVE ME SECONDS
I'm sitting here stuck:
i want to hear my breathing my heart is racing outside my chest
i want to hear my breathing i might fall i might run i might chase down a big leaguer but i can't move, he can't move me: I'm out on a limb, I can't put my hand down I'm seven feet up tall, at least i'm pretty sure I'm a walking stick planted in the ground got hands full of roots, ground under my nails i should take a picture of my shoes i'm so boring there's not much going on in the rest of me oblivious i look like a wooden building wait for an earthquake, how long is this?
i want to fly, i want to go somewhere can i go anywhere? and if i can't where should i go? and if i do not go where is that?so how am i supposed to fix this?Flow pattern recognition as a preprocessing method for multivariate index selection. Multivariate Index Selection methods (MIS) are often used to identify a small set of influential predictors in a regression model by ranking the significance levels of a set of test statistics. However, an MIS approach, which selects the test statistics to be calculated from all possible combinations of predictors by rank-ordering the pre-existing univariate response variables, may achieve considerable redundancy of terms with many subsets being generated from many combinations of the predictors. In these situations, the choice of the contributing predictors for the importance measurement may be difficult. To address this problem, the possibility of predicting the contributions of individual predictors has been suggested by several MSS. However, the status of these methods is not very clear for their non-asymptotic properties, especially their predictive powers in lower prediction error. In this study, we first develop a Fisherian approach to measure the contribution of individual predict

James Welsh, a veteran of two previous U.S. wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, has no illusions about what's to come. But he thinks we should understand what we're up against as we try to survive. "The whole Iraq disaster was a drive to have somebody to blame for 9/11," he said. Welsh talks about the "My Lai problem" — a reference to the infamous 1969 massacre of nearly 500 unarmed Vietnamese civilians by U.S. soldiers — and the "Tet Offensive" that began in Vietnam in 1968. "So we send in a secret mission to assassinate a North Vietnamese general and kill him and his entire staff," Welsh said. "We kill them all. We realize it. Later on, we find out it's the wrong person. So there's a little bit of blame. But then it's just, 'Oh, well, that's Vietnam and that's what's going to happen.' "I thought we were through this. I
