You can create multiple rosters for different activities, such as the awards bank, sign in for attendance or the literacy station tracker. A roster can contain a custom number of students, according to the activities they enrol to. Usually, the roster contains all the students in a class. You can easily mark time outs or strike outs by dragging and dropping the name tags to one of the dedicated boxes. In the Bank, you can add points individually or to the entire class, mark attendance or absence, award stars or sign a student in for the day. There are also rewards you can give to the students for their performance, such as create the list of point leaders, assign a special color to their name tags or select a random student for a lucky ticket. Teacher's assistant Aside from managing students' attendances or performances, you can use MHX Classroom Helper as a countdown clock for timed activities, such as team work or tests. Alternatively, you can use the clock function as a timer. The sound board or the weather game do not require that you create a roster. The hot meal menu can also be adjusted without creating a students' list. You can set the meal names and prices for the current week as well as the next days to come. Monitor students sign in A student is automatically signed in for the classes on a certain day if they simply arrive at school. You can mark them absent if they have a slip or a bus note, or not signed in if they do not show up or have an excuse. Productivity software is designed to help you manage your business. of employees at 2,000 businesses of all sizes, types and industries. OTTAWA – In an exclusive interview with CTV News, Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff admitted he voted for Hillary Clinton in the U.S. presidential election. "I voted for Hillary. I thought she was a very likable person. I found her very intelligent, actually – less intelligent than her husband, maybe, but more intelligent than the current president, who, I'm sorry to say, has gone all out with kind of a gut
