I am using XmlStarlet (in Windows cmdline) to process a subset of an XML document. Specifically, I only want the root element's first attribute and the last node of the root's elements, which I can get with: xmlstarlet sel -t -v '//[@id="single_record"]/@id' myfile.xml This gives me the following output: bx_type This tells me it worked. However, if I run: xmlstarlet sel -t -c -v '//[@id="single_record"]/@id' myfile.xml I get an empty and unwanted element in my output: Why is this element introduced? If it helps, I have used XmlStarlet to generate a (very similar) XML. It did this without introducing any of the elements that I am only wanting. A: After commenting on this, the bug disappeared and it now returns what I expected. Q: HTML.TextBox in the WebBrowser control gets the value on first postback, but is empty on the second postback I have a WebBrowser control in a Silverlight app and I want to populate its TextBox control with the content it currently has on the page. If I enter some text into the HTML.TextBox control then click a button the WebBrowser control does all the work and I'm good to go. The problem is if I click a button which empties the HTML.TextBox then clicks another button which populates the HTML.TextBox and then I leave the WebBrowser control for a while I get an exception at the second click telling me that "The value of the property 'Text' is null. I have verified that the HTML.TextBox.

I would check though if the memory is set properly in BIOS (your answer below says "default settings are never right"). Good idea, after finding a manual I found the setting at this "Motherboard configuration" tab: Re: Not enough memory! Thanks, finally I found it! Anyway I tried to install now the Ram that is coming out and it looks like it doesn't work, so maybe it is the pair or the module that don't come in good condition. Maybe will take the same as it came out but just 4GB. Re: Not enough memory! I got my 2GB to work correctly. Here I show you what I did: From the BIOS I click to the advanced tab and set the memory to "Advanced Configuration and Power Interface (ACPI)". I then got a 16 GB memory and it goes like this: Boot it up. I got the 2 GB back then. (yes, I checked if it was set as "Advanced Configuration and Power Interface (ACPI)") So what I did was, for the motherboard, I don't have the manual for my motherboard, but when I look in the manual for my motherboard, I see "Read to initialize PC settings" at the end. So I reset it to do that. Then it booted up to POST. I then read the manual for the memory and you said that the read command takes time. So I let it be, on "Read to initialize PC settings"

What's new in In League:

A NEW CHAPTER IN THE SCI-FI CANTINA STARFIGHT A DOOMSDAY SCALPING THE GRIFFIN ENTERTAINMENT PUBLISHING COMPANY is thrilled to bring to you another space opera book in the category Slaughter and Bludgeon. Technically, this book has several titles: Crusade of Dishonor, Time's Sons, and finally, if all goes well, a sequel entitled House of the Chosen. Unfortunately, because of the pesky time/space continuum, and various ego conflicts of its star writers, neither of the first two titles will be coming soon! The axe is already falling on the young authors' beards. For all the whining they do about being slaves of corporate publishing, unable to do their own thing at their own speed, they all hate Robert Don Bryant. He's the editor, and I don't give a hoot about company policy. Robert could give a damn who's the chairman of this company or even a writer on staff. Besides, I want to be in a position to write my novel whenever I choose, not at the whim of some commercial agent! Some of these authors have other motives. I don't know about the others, but I can guess, since we're in a backwater world with a completely different set of priorities than what exists elsewhere. For instance, we can write a book as quickly as we want to. We can play around with our ideas until we're ready to present them to the publisher, since there's no worry that some nutty editor might reject the book as wonky. Our readers won't choke on the gratuitous curses. They will pick up the book and read it and write reviews of it and bring it to places where other readers can get it and read it, because it's badged as a science fiction novel. Because of all these advantages, we'll be done pretty damn fast, as a lot of the best selling authors on the market are going to tell you. Well, that was easy to understand, since no one else is writing the genre of gorecity sci-fi. I mean, sure, I'll trot out a story and make the best of it, but my backlog of material murder
