“Squirm may be a strange word. But the game seems to best represent what everyone has seen happen with their body at this point in time.” The Gamer, 2009

Squirm is a shooting game. It's a game of bullets, blood, and death. It is the new style of video game that has killed hundreds of peoples around the world. How does Squirm work? Squirm works by utilizing a ship to control your character. By holding down the shoot button (WASD) at the bottom of the screen. You can shoot your ship in any direction. You can not shoot yourself. You have to have your ship go through a wall or a certain part of the screen if you do not shoot the wall or any other obstacle (if you want to kill yourself go out of the game.) If a bullet kills you, you lose. If you die you lose. If you mess up, the next time you die you lose. There are three types of obstacles. Bullets, walls, and land. Bullets are your main source of health. They will always kill you instantly. However a bullet can bounce off walls and land. Land is a blocky area that you can not shoot through. Land will kill you instantly. Walls are your biggest danger. There are two ways to get through a wall. You can go through a wall or jump over a wall. The only thing that will kill you is getting shot. There is no monster in the game. There are no special abilities in the game. You are just a meat creature with a ship. There are three types of enemies in the game. The red bullet (super evil), a wall that you can not shoot through (boss), and land that you can not shoot. You have to kill the Red Bullet to advance to the next level. The red bullet will become a boss as you advance through the game. There are three levels of play. Each level has its own set of game mechanics. In every level of play. You are just trying to progress as fast as possible. You are not shooting anything. You are not trying to avoid anything. You are just trying to stay alive. Whenever you die, you lose a life. You will have a life bar that you will lose lives over. You can not respawn. You have to successfully kill the boss in each level. You have to go through the level multiple times to finally kill the boss.
