Is there a better way to do it? A: If you want to match a string that consists of different sequences of digits, the following regular expression should do the trick. $re = "/(\d+)([0-9,]+)/"; Here's what it does: (\d+): match any number of digits ([0-9,]+) : match any number of characters among which are A digit ([0-9]) An comma (,) $re is now ready to be used in a preg_match() call, since preg_match() takes a regular expression as its first parameter. In addition, if you wish to match the literal,, you can use the backslash \ as the first character of the regular expression. $re = "/(\\d+)([0-9,]+)/"; $result = preg_match("/$re/", $subject); The present invention relates to an apparatus for document distribution control in a network system connected with a plurality of local networks. Idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura (ITP) is a common hematological disorder, characterized by the presence of a predominantly antibody-mediated platelet destruction. The aim of the study was to investigate the effects of splenectomy in the treatment of ITP.
