Welcome to the fantasy world of Elden. You were once an Elden Lord, the last in a dynasty of Elden Lords. We cut your body into three and raised the spirit of the body that was still alive. We gave you the power of ancient Elden and the blood of a soul. And endowed you with the weapons that can destroy worlds. We told you the legends of the Lands Between, that describes a world where your power is carried by the waves of time, and the distant noises and lights of the world in the waves of time are the traces left by those who once walked on Earth. We told you how this world is filled with dangers and wonders. We told you that the people who come to this world will remain there for a short period of time. We promised that those that survived long enough will be saved from the death of this world, and someday, you'll be reborn as an Elden Lord. In order to live well on Elden, we have prepared not only physical preparations and weapons, but also bequeathed an honorable and pure wisdom, and the courage that is born from the blessings of nobility, and the power of believing in the dead so as to fight. We are the Gods that live on Elden. The strength of the Gods is unlimited, but we lack the will to live forever, and are going to pass away like you and us. We told you, this world is what we have entrusted to you. The Land Between, the seas, the people who live there, and all the people everywhere. Your task is to prepare for the future. We are the Gods that live on Elden.
