Scan, print, or fax print orders via a universal contactless communication platform, such as for example the JBroker® platform of Mondial Contactless Technologies, bring great benefits to both parties. So far, the contactless communication of an order has been available for a user on a fixed machine, such as an ordered machine or a specialized scanning device, and such the user's other contactless communication devices as a smart card or a SIM card. However, until now, no system has been established which provides contactless communication of a print order for the user on a ubiquitous object, such as a handheld portable device. A conceivable approach for providing the user with universal communication and data communication on the handheld portable device is to rely on access to a previously established network. The essential problem in this case is that the user always needs an active connection to the network to be able to use the data communication. When the user leaves the network, the user is no longer able to communicate. One obvious solution to this problem is for the

The propaganda around the American war with Japan in the Philippines was nauseating. The film tells the story of those who dared to tell the truth. Following the attack on Pearl Harbor, General Douglas MacArthur declared the Philippines part of the American war effort and ordered the armed forces to support the puppet government of President Quezon. Once the Japanese garrison was dealt with, MacArthur claimed, the Philippines would be peacefully handed over to the native Filipino people. The Japanese and the Americans had very different ideas on how to achieve victory. The Americans, through their military, risked the lives of many to defy Imperial Japanese forces and fight on. Their base of operations was in the Guadalcanal region, where some of the fiercest engagements of the war took place. With the help of the people of Guadalcanal and neighbouring islands, the Americans -- together with allied Australians and New Zealanders -- were able
