Empty. Output. I want to collect all the file names in the directory, not so much the content of the file itself. A: By using Perl to do the work, this should be what you want: `#!/usr/bin/perl use warnings; use strict; use File::Basename qw(basename); my $dir = "."; opendir (my $dh, $dir) or die "$! : Cannot open directory '". $dir. "' "; my @files = grep {!/$dh/ && -d "$dir/$_" } readdir($dh); closedir $dh; foreach my $file (@files) { print "$file "; my $path = "$dir/$file"; print "$path "; my $is_dir = -d "$path"; print "$is_dir "; my $size = -s "$path"; print "$size "; } Check it here A good example of using the readdir function is shown here Q: Include submodule files in Python docutils Is there a way to include the files located in a submodule in the Python docutils documentation? For example in a module named foo: foo/ __init__.py bar.py I'd like the documentation to contain include... bar.py in the documentation. I assume there's some way to include the module and its submodules in the documentation. Any pointers? A: I was able to include the names of the contents of the submodules like this: {[docs.dict['foo']][bar].__dict__.keys()} My final bit of advice would be that it is critical to understand that social media are no substitute for the real thing. I believe that the rise of social media has had a destructive impact upon the way people think about social networks and social networking. For example, I have seen many people talk about the 'social vs. the real world' and they in essence suggest that social media are a tool which enable people to make friends with (and, as c6a93da74d`
