this is a very simple tool. i am trying to find a way to download videos from various sites and save them in a folder that i could access easily. it works great for the most part, but i have one issue. when i go to download a video, the video starts playing immediately and it does not let me stop it until i stop the download. how can i stop the video from playing when i download? thanks, jason using this software, you can right-click an audio file and send it to google's audio captcha. by clicking the command button, you can also play the audio files. and if you want to play any sound files, you can download the playback tools. and by using the playback tools, you can play any audio file or even mix audio files with one another. and the most important feature of this program is that you can have a sound effect, you can use your own voice for the voice. and you can use the voice playback tool to do it. download. download. theres been some great games for the neo geo pocket color since it launched, but i cant think of any that are as fun as this one. fatal fury is, without doubt, the most arcade-like fighter game for the neo geo pocket color. now for the slightly trickier matter of getting the game working, which gets very repetitive. the easiest way to get the game working is to delete the file d2.mpq and then run the game. it should then be able to connect to battle.net and create your character. although not certain, this is how i got it to work. however, this creates a few problems. one being that you cant log back into battle.net, as its overwritten with the original file, and there is no way to create a new character. you cant delete the file either, as windows defender deletes it the second you try to save it, which is a problem as its supposed to be executable. as such, the only way i found to get around this was to run the game in safe mode and delete the file by hand, and then run the game normally, which is a bit of a pain. you end up with the game working, but battle.net is just not working, so you cant log in. this could be remedied by creating an empty file called bnet.mpq and saving the original file in to it. you can then delete the original, and run the game from the empty file, and save the new game in to the empty file again. there are a few problems with this approach, firstly, you end up with a second copy of the file, and there are issues with the path where the actual game files are stored, so the game cant load them. secondly, the game crashes on startup, and this is mostly likely due to the game not actually being able to read the file, or being corrupted. for the record, i tried this at least three times on a windows 7 x64 computer, with the latest version of diablo 2, and each time the game crashes on startup. i tried saving a new file and running the game, but it crashed, as it would always have done. so i just gave up and deleted the empty file, and then ran the game normally. this didn't work, so i deleted the file again, and ran the game, and it worked. with that being said, i was able to get the game working for about half an hour, i then received a notification from battle.net saying that i was banned, after i had played about an hour of the game. so that was a bit of a pain, but it worked. after that, i tried to save the file to a blank name, and tried to run the game, but it crashed, so i tried to save the file with a blank name to another folder, and tried to run the game, and it crashed. i tried again, and it crashed again. so, that didnt work, and i was unable to create a new character, and unable to log into battle.net, so i gave up again. i never got the file to work correctly. i ran the game in safe mode, and deleted the file, and it worked, and could create a new character, but as before, the actual game files were causing problems. i then deleted the empty file and ran the game normally, and it worked, and i could create a new character. sadly, this was a software bug, as it was able to run for about an hour before i got banned, and then again, and then again, and then i couldnt log into battle.net, and the game would crash. the file never worked correctly, and i just gave up.
