The present invention relates to a hydraulic excavator or the like, and in particular to an attachment tool. A conventional hydraulic excavator, as shown in FIG. 6, comprises a frame (20) to which a driver's seat (11) is attached, and a work vehicle frame (22) extending vertically between a lower structure frame (21) and a lower attachment portion (11) of the driver's seat (11). The frame (20) is attached to the work vehicle frame (22) via a number of attachment pins (23). A front attachment mechanism (10) is attached to the frame (20). A steering device (40) is disposed in the front attachment mechanism (10), and a steering rod (40) is extended vertically through the steering device (40) and is rotatably connected to the driver's seat (11). The lower attachment portion (11) of the driver's seat (11) is formed with a horizontal slit (111) through which the steering rod (40) is passed. A rear attachment mechanism (50) is attached to the work vehicle frame (22). A drive mechanism (60) is attached to the rear attachment mechanism (50). A loader is attached to the work vehicle frame (22). The lower attachment portion (11) of the driver's seat (11) is formed with a blind hole (112) through which a fastening bolt (73) is passed to attach the driver's seat (11) to the lower structure frame (21). A differential type hydraulic circuit is provided to supply hydraulic oil from a hydraulic pump to both sides of a cylinder block (60) in the rear attachment mechanism (50). Thus, both the cylinder block (60) and a rod side cylinder block (61) receive hydraulic pressure for providing a lifting force to the drive mechanism (60), whereby the drive mechanism (60) can be raised and lowered relative to the lower structure frame (21). When the drive mechanism (60) of a hydraulic excavator is raised and lowered, both the cylinder block (60) and the rod side cylinder block (61) are operated, and the lifting force is supplied to the work vehicle frame (22). Therefore, a plurality of attachment pins (23) are provided to maintain the hydraulic excavator in a standing posture. In the hydraulic excavator
