KEYMACRO is a simple macro recording and playback utility. It is compatible with Windows, MacOS and Linux and is available in the main menu of your system. KEYMACRO provides you with an easy-to-use interface where you can record and playback any key combination (such as a keyboard, mouse and joystick combination) that you can select from. You can also set up the playback of your recorded key combination as a hot key. KEYMACRO is not suitable for general users, since you must have basic knowledge of the Windows or MacOS environment in order to use it.

A: If I may make a suggestion... I have a similar problem, where I want to run some command on something else than my whole keyboard, but my keyboard is not my whole screen. I would simply create a shortcut on my desktop or the taskbar, and run the command from there. Some searches on Google, lead me to a program called SWS and I found it working quite well. This does not work on Linux, but they have a Windows version too, which I have not tried. A: Your keyboard can be seen as a computer, and you have to input your commands to your keyboard (which is a mouse). If you don't have a mouse, then how to do you input commands? In general, you can use a notebook, a tablet, or any other device that has a keyboard and a mouse. If you want to automate your PC with the keyboard, you could have a look at this answer. Nearly four in five adults (80%) in the United States say they are online, with half of these users experiencing broadband speeds of less than 10 Mbps. Despite these statistics, only about one in five (21%) adult Internet users in the United States say they have broadband speeds of 10 Mbps or higher. Among the 26% of U.S. adults who have slower broadband speeds, 53% say their broadband service is not fast enough. The Pew Research Center's Internet & American Life Project (IALP), conducted in conjunction with the New America Foundation, found that broadband adoption rates are as low as they have been in decades. "This marks the third consecutive year that a majority of U.S. adults have reported that they are not using high-speed Internet at home," said Lee Rainie, director of the IALP. "Even as the majority of adult Internet 2edc1e01e8
