The Apache HTTPD server is a powerful web server. Apache is used by thousands of large and small organizations around the world. It is the most widespread web server and it can be found on more than 50% of the websites available on the Internet. It is a great server, and this will be the guide to help you install and configure it. In addition to installing the server, you can learn what are some of its features and how to configure it to suit your needs.

# # This is the Apache server configuration file. It contains the # configuration directives that give the server its instructions. # See for detailed information about # the directives and a list of common ones. # # # Do NOT simply read the instructions in here without reading # file /private/apache/conf/httpd.conf. Instead, read # for detailed information # about the directives. # #
# In this example, we will simply install an Apache server with SSL support. We will also use the name of the virtual host as the hostname in the browser address bar. # # Use name-based virtual hosting. # ServerName www.example.com # # Access control: # Order deny,allow
