As we know, every designer is interested in a collaborative workspace to work together, and Photoshop has been a leading tool in that regard, but it is possible to work on the same project in multiple clients or browsers, which could slow up the Photoshop workflow. With the new Photoshop CS6 Share for Review, users can open Photoshop projects while staying in Photoshop and collaborate together with others on those assets. Instead of having to load multiple workspaces to collaborate on and share files, this new feature enables users to simply have a streamlined workflow, and deliver assets to team members in a collaborative workspace while staying in Photoshop. Users can work this out in a non-collaborative mode, and add a collaborator through this new feature and start collaborating, without leaving Photoshop. The new Share for Review feature is available as an add on to the multi-user Photoshop CS6 that is available in the Release Candidate (RC) version of the software. The new features in Photoshop CS6 are aimed at making image processing faster, increasing the supply of actions with more than 200 new actions, and giving users more creative options including the new Reduce and Transform commands. Users can also save time and effort by automatically promoting an image as a preset, reducing the amount of time spent on copy/paste and tagging when saving images. For users that choose to work in a collaborative workspace, the new version of Photoshop CS6 contains a new Facial Tools Collection. As the name varies, these are tools which should help any user who needs to get better at or perfect their facial processing skills. The Face Mask, and Frown Correction, Skin Brightener, and Smiling Eyes make up the collection, and the user can follow the tutorials on the web to learn the skills.
