Weber (Trivium album) Name Weber Album Trivium Song title "Severant" Song meaning Weber is a device manufactured by the brothers Andreas and Georg Weber. The Webers kept a number of different devices in their factory, of which the well-known Vibromax was invented and produced by them. Some of the others were part of the "Bundesland" (Federal Republic of Germany) warship program and the devices were to have been installed on the Suhle-class corvettes. It is not known if any of these devices ever entered mass production. To create the cover, they used a picture of a pair of vibrator horns mounted on a small box, with the device's name and logo, the address of the manufacturer, and on top, the German expression. To study the effects of isosorbide dinitrate (ISDN) on the ventricular electrophysiology and ischemic tolerance of the rabbit myocardium, measurements were made of the effective refractory period (ERP), action potential duration (APD), time to contractions (TTC) and recovery of excitability following programmed stimulation of the Purkinje fibers (PSP) as well as ischemic tolerance of the myocardium at various times after reperfusion of the ischemic myocardium following global ischemia produced by the arrest of all coronary flow. The results indicate that ISDN (50 mg/kg/h) fails to increase or maintain the PSP in comparison to hydralazine (30 mg/kg/h) even though ISDN was found to be more protective than hydralazine against ischemic damage. Furthermore, no differences in ERP, TTC or APD were found between the two drugs when data were compared preischemia and at various times following reperfusion.
